Nurses and Anesthetics. The order of the program was changed somewhat, and Miss Alice Bruton, anesthetist in the Protestant Hosistration of Anesthetics by Women." Her opening statement was that the average practicing physician and hos-pital interne knows less about the administration of anesthetics than the trained nurse, and that the latter, through wide experience, is better fitted to perform this office preliminary to an direction affords her more opportunity how to manage the patient, and gives her that experience from which she knows how to treat individual patients. Her favorite method, Miss Bruton said, was ether dropping, which she described in technical terms. One of the first requirements of the anesthetist, she said, was the exercise of considdence, on which much depends. She argued against the practice of some physicians of talking "at" the nurse during the administration of the anesthetic, saying that it was best to let an experienced nurse administer it in her own way. The general discussion which followed favored the practice of permitting trained nurses to administer anestheties.

Advice to Young Nurses. Advice to Young Nurses.

Miss Isabelle McIsaac, an earnest woman, well versed in her profession, talked on "Opportunities and Responsibilities of the Young Graduate Nurse."

She said that there are nearly 100,-000 trained nurses in the country, and that they have serious problems to confront, and must, therefore, work in harmony. She spoke of the first organization, the Association of Super-intendents, founded by Miss Hampton, later known as Mrs. Robb, whose whole heart interest lay in her world and in the beginning of young nurses.

Miss McIsaac spoke strongly of the need for system, organization and co-ordination. She referred to the fact that all other great works of mankind are the result of correlated effort, and GOOD THINGS—GOOD THINGS—ALL to be found in the sweets at CLARK'S. Pound cake, raisin cake (can't be beat for the money), in fact, all kinds of large and small cakes; any kind of pies. And you just should try our bread and rolls. "It is such so-called nurses as these who bring odium sometimes on our profession," said Miss McIsaac, "The greatest obstacle with which we have to contend," she said, "is the nurse doubtful in efficiency and in character." She pleaded for State registration, saying that there should be some standard which would be recognized every where, something by which the train ed nurse, as well as the public, could be defended against imposters or incompetents.

people in the house would follow the nurse's example and do what she had done. He also carnestly recommended that nurses co-operate with the medical authorities. But he laid especial stress on the fact that nurses must care for themselves, in order that they might endure against infection from the white plague. He thought that hard work might reduce the mortality in five years to almost nothing.

The morning session was devoted to business, to the reading of the president's report and to the collection of dues.

The convention will end this morning. Mrs. Tilden Smith will talk on "the Care of Incubator Babies", Miss Isabel Stuart, of Teachers' College, Columbia University, New York, on "The Training of Hospital Administrators and the Relation of the Hospital to Social Service Work," and Miss Mary Johnston will speak on "Why Nurses Should Be Interested in Equal Suffrage."

The sossion will close with the residence, No. 1100 West Avenue.
